THREE RIFLES ARE DISCOVERED

The Ex-Queen's Ex-Minister is Be-

NICK" PETERSON ARRESTED.

Several Hackmen Suspected of Delivering Arms-A Big Royalist Meeting at Ino. Cummins'.

[From Saturday's Daily.]

A little before 12 o'clock last night the residence of John F. Colburn, royalist and ex-minister of a rotten Government, was raided by the police, because he was known to have arms in his possession to be used for the purpose of restoring a disgraced queen to a disgraced throne.

The Marshal and his deputies have suspected for some time that Colburn was concealing firearms on his premises, and his place has been watched by the police. For the last few days a closer watch than usual has been kept, with the result that several suspicious boxes have been seen to be carried in. Last night a man named Evans, a mounted policeman who patrols that district, saw a box about five or six feet in length, being carried into the house. He at once telephoned to T.B. Murray, from the ice works. Murray went to the Marshal and informed him of the circumstances, and a raid was planned. The Marshal swore out a search warrant and put it in the hands of Deputy-Marshal Brown. The latter, accompanied by Captain Andrews and a posse of policemen, went out at once to Colburn's house. Colburn, when called to the door, expressed no surprise at the proceedings. The Deputy Marshal read him the search warrant, and told him that his house would have to be searched in accordance with the order. Colburn did not demur, but smilingly consented to the proceeding, but from his looks it was easy to see that he was raging inwardly, and would have liked nothing better than a chance to annihilate his visitors. The women who were in the house were the most disturbed, and, although they did not try to interfere with the search, yet they were most bitter in their remarks to the officers. A most thorough search of the house was made, with the result of finding three rifles-one Springfield, one hammerless Sharp, and one splendid Winchester repeater of the latest pattern.

In spite of the fact that the house was ransacked in every corner, three guns were all that was found. Of course, if even ordinary precautions had been taken and the balance of the guns buried, it would have been difficult for the officers to have discovered them at night, The general impression is that such is the case, and that The Ex-Attorney General Also more of the firearms are concealed underground in Colburn's yard.

Several backmen are suspected of having been actively engaged in taking guns and ammunition to the held, however.

In the garret of Colburn's house, a double floor was found, but nothing was concealed there. A search was also made under the house, with the same result, but if arms had been buried, nothing would have been easier than to have covered them up, so as to completely hide them.

Marshal Hitchcock, who was in his office at the time the raid was made, said, in speaking of the affair:

"I have for some time suspected this man Colburn of being more than a passive adherent of the ex-queen. We hack. In it was George Cavenagh, have had positive evidence that arms and ammunition have been carried to his house, and also to the homes of other prominent men in the royalist party, and I am determined to break up the practice if possible. There was a big royalist meeting held at the residence of John Cummins last evening, and I had some of my men watching the house. As soon as Cummins suspected that there was anyone watching his house, all the lights were put out, and darkness reigned. "As to this Colburn matter, during the last two or three days several boxes have been carried into Colburn's house, by men who were known to be active in their hostility to the Provisional Government. This, coupled with other susplcious circumstances, led to the search that was made and the discovery of the rifles. That Colburn has been cunning enough to conceal the larger part of his stock of firearms, I have no doubt, but as thorough a search as it was possible to make at night, was made. We found three, and that was enough to prove that he was deeply implicated in a plot to restore the ex-queen. "Colburn, of course, has known that at any time a raid might be made on his premises, and he probably was all ready for the visit of the officers, and had the balance of the arms concealed." Deputy-Marshal Brown said that Colburn did not make any objection to his house being searched. "When I asked him about the boxes that had been brought there on Thursday and Friday, he said that the only boxes he knew anything about were three boxes of pineapple plants that in boxes five feet long, that are just the size for containing rifles," T. B. Murray, to whom Evans, the natrolman, telephoned the circum-

he had received on Thursday. But pineapple plants are not usually put stances of the Colburn matter, said: "When Evans informed me that he had again seen a gun box being carried into Colburn's yard, I at once informed the Marshal of the circumstances. He asked me if I was sure of the authenticity of my information, and I told him that I was, but that I would go again and get positive information of the truth of the report. This I did, and found out to a certainty the fact that two gun boxes had been taken into the house. I returned to the Marshal, and told him, and he sent some men with me, telling us to go out as quickly as possible, and to get what we could." The result has been told already. Colburn's house was surrounded by policemen all night, and a more systematic search will be made at day-

The Marshal's department, from its chief to its most subordinate officer. are strictly on the alert, and are fully prepared to take action in any such case as arose last night. They deserve great credit for nipping such plots in the bud, before they have a chance to mature. Colburn, A. P. Peterson, Sam. Parker and Charlie Wilson were seen in very earnest conversation several times on Kaahumanu street yesterday afternoon. Whenever they saw a man from the Marshal's office, or one whom they suspected would be apt to say anything about their being together, they would separate, but soon drift back and again begin their excited conversation.

PETERSON TOO.

That the fact of the guns being concealed on Colburn's premises was known to all of them is, of course, undoubted.

Suspected of Concealing

Firearms.

As soon as the officers returned from houses of the principal sup- the raid at Colburn's, they were porters of the ex-queen. One sent out to the house of A. P. Peterof them, Nick Peterson, of the son, who was also suspected of having United Carriage Company's stand, arms in his possession. One of the was arrested during the evening, sus- mounted police had reported that he pected of being the one who had de- had seen a box being carried in late livered guns to Colburn. He was not at night, and when the officers arrived, they heard a sound as though the lid was being torn off a large sized box. One of the officers saw "Nick" Peterson, the same backman who had been arrested earlier in the evening, drive his back into the yard. . As the police had no search warrant, they, of course, could not search the premises.

When "Nick" came out of the yard. one of the police called to him to stop. He paid no attention to the order, but started to drive off. The officer jumped to the horse's hend and stopped the a bartender in the Commercial saloon. The police ordered them to drive to the Station House, and "Nick" demanded, "Who is going to pay for my back." This did not disturb the offi-hack." This did not disturb the offi-cers any, and he was made to carry a free load.

When they arrived at the Station House, Cavenagh refused to allow a policeman to search him. But regard-less of his objections he was taken in-to the Marshal's office and his clothes gone through to the Marshal's office and his clothes gone through.

While Cavenagh was being searched. "Nick" stood on the sidewalk outside, watching his hack. He was evidently nervous, although he talked to the officers in a meant-to-be jocular tone. He was later called into the Marshal's office, and put through the same course of sprouts that Cavenagh had endured.

had endured.

Cavenagh and Peterson were both strictly examined by the Marshal. Both absolutely refused to give the slightest explanation of their actions, but strenuously denied that they had done anything to deserve being arrested. They were released, and Cavenagh was ordered to report to the Marshal at $300 o'clock this morning. Cavenagh, when seen after the Mar-shal was through with him, and asked what they were going to do to him, said: "Hang me, I guess. It's a pity that a man can't carry a few bottles of gin out on the Plains without being arrested. Both Colburn and Peterson will be subjected to a severe scutiny by the police hereafter. That they are trying to awake a revolutionary feeling is undoubted, and that one plot has been nipped in the bud is also a fact. Roy-alists who have guns will probably deposit them in a safe place hereafter.

NO TROUBLE AS YET.

The People Are on the Out Vive. Awaiting Willis' Action.

MONDAY NOON, Dec. 18. It is reported, this morning, that the Japanese and English men-ofwar have requested permission to land their troops to protect the lives and property of Japanese and it is said, has been refused. The city is excited, and every one is on the qui vire with expectation of some movement hostile to the Provisional Government. Nineteen policemen and four lieutenants of police have been discharged from the service, they refusing to carry a gun in defense of the Government. A large crowd of natives is congregated on Brewer's wharf, waiting for the landing of the troops from the warships. It is hardly probable, however, that any trouble will be had to-day. The Provisional Government is strong and determined to "hold the fort" if possible.
